Ransomware Survival, 3 Priorities for Businesses

Yes	No	Ransomware Survival for my business
1. Secure Network
		I have a Firewall configured with specific criteria to block or prevent access to a network
		I have Content Filtering to control the websites my employees visit
		I have an Antivirus solution that is pushed out to all devices connected to our corporate network
		I have Advanced Threat Detection to scrutinize emails before they reach our network
		I have Remote Network Monitoring that notifies my IT administrator proactively in the event a threat detected
2. Staff Training
		My staff have been trained on safe emailing practices
		My staff can identify a malicious email that is intended to persuade them to click on bad links
		My staff have been trained on safe website clicking practices
3. Data Backup and Restore
		I have an automated backup solution that backs up my data daily
		I have a backup device that holds my data outside of my network
		I have a copy of our business data held offsite or in the cloud
		My data can be easily restored from my backup device

If you answered YES to all of these items then you are at the Gold Standard for Ransomware Protection, and congratulations for making this investment in your IT and data security.

If you answered NO to any of these items, it is critical that you take action to put these items in place as soon as possible. Ransomware attacks are a daily issue and no business or industry is immune to the attacks, take the first steps to protect your business with a ransomware assessment.
